Reagan Gets Warning on High Interest

By Edward Cowan New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - President Reagan's most senior economic advisers have warned him that continuing high interest rates could cut deeply into the economy across a broad front, weakening year and driving unemployment higher.

At a White House meeting Wednesday with Cabinet-rank officials, Mr. Reagan was told that unless interest rates come down soon there could be pronounced softening of business investment plans and business inventories. The weakness in anto sales and house buying caused by high interest rates could spread to other durable goods, the advisers said.

Administration officials reported the essence of the appraisal as part of a White House drive to prepare Congress for more cuts in the budget, including military spend-

Dismayed and frustrated by the apparently perverse rise of interest rates in recent weeks despite slower inflation and deep budget cuts by Congress, Budget Director David A. Stockman and other sen--- ior aides have concluded that the government - White House and Congress — must make an even greater show of willingness to tighten spending and hold down the budget delicit.

Political Risk

As politically risky as this may be for Mr. Reagan and Republican hopes of winning control of the House next year, the president's advisers have concluded that there is nothing else he can do.

The new emphasis on interest rates was reflected in remarks by two senior Republican congressional leaders who conferred with Mr. Reagan at the White House on sional leaders who conferred with Wednesday. Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, the Senate ... := majority leader, said, "The time is - now to address the high interest rates and get them down."

Chastising the financial commu-nity, Sen. Baker said, "It's time they pulled their oar."
"We can't live with a 20-percent

ega kā prime rate and expect to see any economic recovery," said the House minority leader, Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Administration economists indicated that their own prognoses are almost as grave. They said there was a good chance that the fourthquarter economic upturn predicted by the administration in July might not occur and that the first quarter of 1982 might also be lack-

Workmen carried the crate containing Picasso's celebrated Spanish Civil War work, "Guernica," into an annex of Madrid's Prado museum Thursday after it arrived from New York.

MADRID — At 10:08 a.m.,
the movers in blue overalls deposited the huge wooden crate

"Use No Hooks" in English in the stone pavilion a block away from the Prado museum. Civil Guards with submachine guns looked on. A helicopter clattered overhead.

The 44-year-old odyssey of Pablo Picasso's "Guernica" was over, and, more or less as he had wanted, his masterpiece finally rested in his homeland's greatest museum - or an annex of it and in a Spain where democratic freedoms have been restored. The work's secretive departure Wednesday night from New York and its unspectacular arrival here Thursday morning aboard a regular Iberia Airlines flight prevented Culture Minister Inigo Cavero and other officials who accompanied the crated painting from making a big political splash.

Even so, newspapers and poli-ticians hailed what is regularly and erroneously called "the re-turn" of "Guernica" to Spain where it has never been before — as a symbol of the robustness of the country's young demo-cratic institutions.

A Major Moment

"Welcome!" bannered the afternoon tabloid Diario 16, which in a front-page editorial pro-claimed the painting "one of the major moments of the history of our people."

Inspired and outraged by the bombing of the Basque town of Guernica during the Spanish Civil War, Picasso painted it in a burst of activity in Paris in 1937, under commission from the Republican government in Madrid. But after Franco's victory in the war, the artist insisted that the painting should go to Spain and then to the Prado - only

Solidarity's Congress Backs Free Parliament Elections

GDANSK, Poland - The Solidarity trade union, condemning Communist misrale, called Thursday for free political elections and vowed to free Poles from "misery, exploitation, lies and fear."

Undeterred by counterattacks from the Soviet Union and its allies, Solidarity's first national con-gress issued fresh challenges to Po-land's Communist rulers. As well as free elections to Parliament and local councils, it demanded control over food, worker self-management and public control of the mass media

The program was adopted at the end of the first stage of the congress, which will be in recess until Sept. 26.

Eye on Voting

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa won two key votes in favor of a strong central authority in the union after threatening to resign if re-gionalists won. In a closing ad-dress, he said: "We have 2 chance to create the Poland of which our ancestors could only dream. If our program is bad, we will bear the blame ... not the government."

The flow of resolutions from the congress prompted Tass to accuse it of indulging in an "anti-Socialist and east Section 2021." and anti-Soviet orgy."

The free election call was made with an eye on municipal voting due early next year. It will be the first since the emergence of Soli-darity as a force in Polish politics. The union said it wanted the law under which only Communist-approved candidates can run for elective office to be changed so that outsiders may stand. It plans to draft an electoral law of its own. Despite its efforts to erode Communist power, Solidarity drew back from an outright challenge to

Communist supremacy. Delegates declined to pass a resolution that said the Communist Party's role should be redefined to prevent its leading Poland "to a new national catastrophe."

The resolution had said that the "Polish nation faces the gigantic task of saving the country from the collapse caused by the way it has been governed to date."

The union pledged it would work to "liberate Poles from misery, exploitation, fear and lies to ensure democracy and the obser-vance of law in Poland." It insisted the reforms it had in mind were in the best interests of both Poland and the Soviet bloc.

To appease such regional anger Barcelona, with its fine Picasso Museum, has in the past also claimed the painting — Mr. Cavero said it was possible that the "Guernica" might eventually trav-el around Spain. Curators at the Museum of Modern Art are known to have insisted that Thursday's trip be the last by the faintly cracked and much-traveled canvas, although Mr. Cavero denied promising them that it would never be moved again.

Mr. Cavero said the painting and its accompanying preparatory drawings and so-called "postscripts" would be unveiled to the public at the centenary of Picasso's birth — Oct. 25 — in the Cason del Buen Retiro, as the columned Prado annex is called. The "Guernica" will be protected by a clear, three-sided bulletproof shield, and visitors, watched by closed circuit television, will have to pass through metal detectors. In November, the painting will be the centerpiece of a major Picasso retrospective that will open in Madrid, giving Spaniards a chance to learn more about an artist who has been something of a prophet without honor in his homeland.

Envoy Says Reagan Wants More F-16s Produced

ley said Thursday that the Reagan administration wants to increase production of F-16 jet fighters, but he avoided mention of a delivery date of the aircraft promised to Pakistan. Pakistan has pressed for quick delivery of the advanced aircraft, promised in June as part of a $3-billion military and economic aid package. After three days of talks here on the package, Mr. Buckley said the Reagan administration had promised a bigger military budget and wants to increase production of the F-16 aircraft, but it will "take some time."

He said "preparedness is the key word of the Reagan administration" on military matters. Any reductions in the budget, he said, "are not going to be made at the expense of the strength the United States must have to meet its global responsibilities."

Nicaragua Sets Emergency Economic Rules

. United Press International

MANAGUA - Nicaragua's government has declared a yearlong economic state of emergency, slapping a ban on strikes and court injunctions that block government decrees.

The order, read on nationwide radio and television Wednesday by Junta Coordinator Daniel Ortega, also outlaws distribution of false news stories that trigger changes in prices, salaries, tents or currency exchange rates.

Also banned are mass land takeovers and incitement of foreign governments or credit institutions to withhold or suspend economic aid to Nicaragna. In addition, the government is imposing a hiring freeze, trimming the current budget by 5 percent and slashing private sector subsidies by 10 percent in a move that should save the Nicaraguan treasury $43.8 million this year, Mr. Ortega said.

that responsibility." Mr. Waldheim said in a prepared statement.

Mr. Waldheim, whose current term expires at the end of the year, cited his "great anxiety" for the current international situation as his reason for seeking the post again. Concorde Cuts Not on Anglo-French Agenda

PARIS — The French government is considering cutting Air France's Concorde services, but President Francois Mitterrand did not plan to raise the subject in talks with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that began in London on Thursday, French officials said.

French Transport Ministry and industry officials said that the question of the "commercial exploitation" of the Anglo-French supersonic airliner had come under study because of continuing heavy operating losses and the burden on taxpayers.

The bilateral treaty of November, 1962, that started the Concorde program says that neither side can halt its Concorde services without continuing to support the operations of the other party. The total cost of developing and producing 16 Concorde aircraft, shared between Britain and France, stood in June, 1980, at £1.33 billion.

TOKYO - Premier Zenko Suzuki made an aerial inspection of the four Soviet-beld Kuril islands Thursday and vowed to get Japan's neighbor to return the "northern territories."

The Soviet Union consistently has said the problem was "nonexistent" and has refused to discuss the matter. The Soviet occupation of the four islands during the closing days of World War II has prevented the two nations from concluding a peace treaty officially ending the conflict.

"I was deeply moved when I observed by air and from land the north-

Egypt Expels ABC Television Correspondent

Washington Post Service

CAIRO — The Egyptian government Thursday expelled the correspondent of the American television network ABC, Chris J. Harper, and gave him 24 hours to leave the country.

Mr. Harper's expulsion came after a fierce denunciation Wednesday by President Anwar Sadat of the Western press, particularly the American press, for its reporting on his recent crackdown against opponents of his government. Mr. Sadat maintained that the foreign press had presented what he said was a "distorted" image of Egypt and himself, including suggestions that his government is unstable and headed for a fate similar to that of the Iranian monarchy.

Egyptians voted Thursday in a referendum on Mr. Sadat's purge of what he considers to be Moslem and Christian religious fanatics and political opponents. Overwhelming approval was expected.

The expulsion order came shortly after the State Information Services showed to the foreign press corps a videotape of an interview Mr. Harper had done with David Hurst, a British correspondent based in Beirut who is known for his strong anti-Sadat views. Mr. Harper had no comment on the expulsion order except to say that he understood that it would not have an effect on ABC operations, "only me."

Limits on Saudi Use Of AWACS Considered Normal in Arms Sales

By Charles Mohr New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - Some of the limitations on the use of five Airborne Warning and Control Sys-tems aircraft that the Reagan administration wishes to sell to Saudi Arehia are what a senior U.S. official calls "standard strictures" common to all sales of military equipment to foreign governments. rather than special concessions by the Saudi government.
Such standard restrictions include what are called "third-country exclusions," which prevent a buyer of U.S. military equipment from transferring the equipment to another country without permis-sion from the United States. Another standard agreement is to-maintain the security of secret and sensitive equipment.

Safeguards against use of the planes, known as AWACS, against Israel in a future Arab-Israeli conflict are expected to figure promi-nently in congressional debate over the proposed $8.5-billion sale of air combat equipment.

The standard Department of Defense "offer and acceptance" form (No. 1513) used in the Saudi sale says the weapons may be used only "for internal security, individual self-defense and/or civic action." Civic action is defined as construction, economic develop-ment or social development work done by the military for the people of the country.

Disagreements about the meaning of this language can arise, as was demonstrated by the contro-versy after Israel's air raid on an Iraqi nuclear reactor on June 7. The contract form, used in more than $13 billion of military sales last year, also says the buyer "shall not transfer title to, or possession of, the defense articles, components and associated support material, related training or any other defense services (including any plans, specifications or information)" to other parties.

The 1513 form also specifies that if the material being sold is classified as secret, the buyer shall maintain a similar classification and employ all measures necessary to preserve such security, equivalent to those employed by the United States Government."

In large and complex sales such as the proposed radar-plane deal. the practice is to supplement the three-page 1513 form with more detailed "notes" agreed to by the United States and the boyer. Officials said the notes in this sale are voluminous, but essentially consti-tute "extra words to the standard

After promising to help Mr. Alikhani, investigators said, the sales-man contacted both the FBI and the county sheriff's office. The next day an undercover deputy sheriff contacted Mr. Alikhani by posing as a potential killer for hire and was asked to murder Ashraf Pahlavi, authorities said.

U.S. High Court Upholds Ban on Primary in N.Y.C.

NEW YORK - The U.S. Supreme Court refused, 7-0, to over-turn a lower court ruling that barred primary voting in New York City on Thursday for all of-fices in three boroughs, including mayor and comptroller.

The decision was issued after lawyers for the city and those for black and Hispanic groups pre-black and Hispanic groups pre-sented arguments before Justice Thurgood Marshall. He conferred with his colleagues and they then issued their brief ruling.

There was no primary voting Thursday for city offices. The only balloting was in a few local races in Queeus and Staten Island. The primary was thrown into disarray Tuesday when a U.S. court, ruling on a suit brought by black and Hispanic groups under the 1965 Voting Rights Act, prohibited vot-ing Thursday in Brooklyn, Manhattan and the Bronx. The suit had charged that newly drawn lines for City Council districts discriminated against black and Hispanic people by, among other things, diluting their voting strength in that legislative body. The 1965 Voting Rights Act, invoked in the case, was intended originally to counter anti-black discrimination in the South.

Under the law, the new City Council lines, drawn to comply with population shifts, should have received clearance from the Justice Department. The court found the redistricting lacked this necessary clearance. But it did not address the broader question of whether the new council lines were discrim-

Army Call-Up Reported in Afghanistan

Action Seen Leading To Increased Unrest

By Tyler Marshall Los Angeles Times Service NEW DELHI — A recently annotinced sweeping call-up of all military veterans under 35 by the Soviet-backed regime in Afghanistan has deepened already strong anti-government feeling and led to further unrest in the nation, a Western diplomat says.

The diplomat said Wednesday that disturbances broke out in at least one Kabul girls' school on Monday, apparently protesting the draft call amounced the previous day. Young women were in the vanguard of student demonstrations last year against the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan; the protests wracked the Afghan capi-protests wracked the Atgnan capital during much of the year.

The diplomat noted that because military service has been compulsory in Afghanistan for many years, the recall amounts to a blanket draft of all Afghan men under the age of 35.

Because most younger men are either already in uniform or out of the country, he predicted that the loss of all those under 35 will have a disastrous effect on government business and what little industry still operates in Afghanistan.

Half of Staff

He said he knew of one 20-man Kabul office that would lose half its staff and another that would lose five of 30 employees. Short-staffed government ministries will be further hit, he noted. "The Foreign Ministry is al-ready a morgue," he said. "This will make it that much worse."

will make it that much worse."

The call-up is viewed as the latest and most dramatic in a series of moves by President Babrak Karmal's regime to resuscitate the beleaguered Afghan Army.

Desertions, purges and casualties incurred in fighting a bitter nationwide insurgency dedicated to removing three successive Marxist regimes have reduced the army to about one-third of its original strength of 80,000 in the past three and a half years.

Previous Measures

Rebuilding the army so it can protect the government on its own is seen as a prerequisite for any substantial withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. Moscow is transforming Afghanistan's ba-sic institutions to fit the Soviet and motions to in the Soviet mold, but it would prefer to have the new system defended by Afghan rather than Soviet forces, area specialists believe.

All previous measures, however, including rounding up teen-agers and drafting them, have failed to keep pace with the high rate of

Just how effective the latest call-up will be is unclear, but the reill have access or living in the country's few urban centers and small patches of ontlying land it still controls in the predominantly rural nation. Last month the government created new provincial delense councils with the responsibility for enforcing existing military conscrip-tion orders. The councils have already begun implementing the new GENEVA — A United Nations panel Thursday recommended cre-ation of an office of a UN high commissioner on human rights as an "effective way" for the world body to confront rights abuses. The Subcommission on Preven-

Turkey Turning Face Toward Middle East

By Marvine Howe

New York Tunes Service ANKARA — Turkey's military rulers, who seized power a year ago, have intensified the nation's efforts to play a more active role in the Middle East.

Their policy, which is described by officials as "economic realism" and also apparently has political overtones, was underscored Tuesday with the arrival here of the emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, for a two-day visit. Describing the visit as a historic occasion, the Turkish press said it was the first by an Arab head of state from a Gulf country.

In a determined effort to gain solvency with their Arab oil suppliers. Turks in general are pushing such diverse exports to Middle East countries as contract engineers, skilled workers, flight attendants, refrigerators, trucks and mineral water.

Ataturk's Policies

Deputy Premier Turgut Ozal, the chief architect of Turkey's austerity plan, is trying to sell Kuwait an "economic cooperation package" for the Gulf that would involve large Arab capital investment in Turkey. The package includes road, irrigation, food and agricultural projects and the build-ing of communications networks. chemical plants, social-medical centers and holiday villages.

Turkey's policy is in sharp contrast to that of Kemal Ataturk.

President of Iraq Doubts U.S. Role In Reactor Attack

BEIRUT — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has expressed doubt in a interview that the United States was involved in the Israeli air strike that reportedly destroyed an Iraqi nuclear reactor. Some Arab governments and organizations have accused Washington of knowledge of or participa-tion in the raid, which occurred on June 7. The United States has de-

"No, until now, we do not have any clear evidence" that the United States participated in the attack, Mr. Hussein told Radio Monte Carlo in an interview in Arabic in Damascus that was broadcast Wednesday and monitored in

Mr. Hussein indirectly admitted that the Israelis had destroyed the reactor, saying, "Yes, we will build [another] one and more in cooperation with the same countries and others as well." He added: "The attack is a lesson for us. A lesson and an incentive to make us build new ones [reactors]."

France has promised to rebuild the reactor but only under tight inspection conditions to prevent the diversion of nuclear material for military purposes. Saudi Arabia has offered to cover the full cost of

Correction

The Associated Press NEW YORK — The Associated Press erroneously reported in story published in the International Herald Tribune on Sept. 4 that Geo magazine had enough time to remove faked photos of pandas in the wild from its German edition. The pictures were printed in the German edition as well as the U.S.

who deliberately turned his back on the Middle East when he set up his Western-style, secular republic in this Moslem country in 1923. Ataturk rejected many aspects of Middle Eastern life that he considered backward, among them Islamic law and Arabic script, the fez and the veil, and unequal treatment of women, In recent years, Turkey has found itself increasingly bound economically to the Middle East because of the high cost of its oil imports. Last year, its revenue from all exports equaled what it paid to import oil.

The relative importance of the Middle East to the Turkish economy has also increased as European countries, hit by recession, have reduced their imports of goods and migrant workers from Turkey. Officially. Turkey, a member of the Atlantic alliance, demonstrated its readiness for a new Middle East policy in 1976 by holding the Islamic Conference's foreign ministers meeting in Istanbul Previ-ously, Turkey had shunned the Islamic Conference. Since then, there has been progressive im-provement in relations with Islamic countries, particularly the oil-producing nations.

From Ankara, official sources say privately, the Middle East is seen somewhat as a counterbal-ance to close dependence on the United States and isolation from West European countries, particularly West Germany, that are critical of Turkey's military rule.

As part of its Middle East policy, Turkey has taken its distance from Israel, once regarded as a ma-jor partner and model. Last winter, relations were downgraded to the point that a second secretary was the chief of mission.

Apparently as a result of the new policy, Iraq is to become Turkey's primary trading partner next year under a new trade agreement, replacing West Germany

Turkey's exports to the Middle East have soared, reaching 11 percent of the area's imports, and 335 Turkish companies have $7 billion in contracts in the Arab countries, primarily Libya, Iraq and Saudi Arabia. This is expected to reach $10 billion by the end of the year. Likewise, about 200,000 Turkish workers have new jobs in the Mid-

Mugabe Charges Muzorewa Trains an Army In South Africa to Depose His Government

SALISBURY - Prime Minister Robert Mugabe has charged that his predecessor, Abel Muzorewa, is training an army in South Africa to overthrow his 16-month-old government, The Herald newspa-per reported Thursday.

The pro-government daily quoted Mr. Mugabe as saying that the former prime minister has 5,000 former auxiliary soldiers in neighboring South Africa. Mr. Mugaestantained zorewa, an American-trained Methodist bishop, was head of an interim government in 1979 and 1980 that transferred control of the former colony of Rhodesia from the white minority to blacks. In April, 1980, Mr. Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Unity (ZANU) party won a majority of the seats in the House of Assembly in British-sponsored elections. 'Disgrantlet Elements'

The prime minister, speaking at a rally in Zaka village in southeast Zimbabwe, accused Mr. Muzorewa of collaborating with South Africa's white-minority government, the paper said.

Calling for greater vigilance, Mr. Mugabe was quoted by the paper as saying "disgruntled elements" that lost the elections were plotting to bring the government down.

"Some say there will be a new government. There will never be another government controlled by party other than ZANU," Mr. Mugabe was reported as saying amid cheers from 6,000 villagers. In Salisbury, meanwhile, a dis-

U.S. Grand Jury Reportedly Probes Abuse of Funds by Chicago Prelate

CHICAGO — A federal grand jury is investigating whether Cardinal John P. Cody illegally diverted tax-exempt church Chicago Sun sonal friend, the Chicago Sun-Times reported Thursday.

The newspaper said the grand jury has issued subpoenas for financial records of the Chicago ar-chdiocese, the cardinal and his friend, Helen Dolan Wilson of St. Louis. U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said his office received the allegations, but he refused to say whether there was a grand jury in-vestigation of Cardinal Cody.

The newspaper said it had learned Cardinal Cody provided almost $90,000 in 1969 and 1970 for Mrs. Wilson to buy a home in Boca Raton, Fla., shortly after she retired from an $8,000-a-year position as an office manager in St.

The grand jury is looking into the source of those funds, according to unnamed sources quoted by the Sun-Times. Cardinal Cody, reached by the newspaper at a bishops' conference in suburban Mundelein, declined to comment on the report, but an archdiocesan spokesman categorically denied

Related Rite

The government, in a related September rite, earnestly an-nounces it is going to do some-thing about the cost of living.

This time, the government is headed by Giovanni Spadolini, the first premier in 35 years who is not Christian Democrat. A cherubic,

The list of guideline prices ranges from 950 lire for a kilogram of spaghetti to 1,100 lire for 100 grams of packaged, sliced salami.

Political Muscle

Much of the jawboning was done by Giovanni Marcora, the minister of industry, commerce and handicrafts. Mr. Marcora, who was long in charge of agriculture and is remembered as a forceful defender of Italian farm interests in Brussels, is an influential member of the Christian Demo-

Mr. Marcora lent political muscle to the premier's efforts to make the sting less painful. As leader of the small Republican Party, one of the five middle-of-the-road groups in his government alliance, Mr. Spadolini does not have much of a power base. After 10 weeks in office, he needs some success.

The shopkeepers - of whom haly has more per head of popula-tion than any other industrial na--have declared through their spokesmen they do not really believe in voluntary restraints, but will cooperate for the next two months. Consumer advocates also are voicing skepticism.

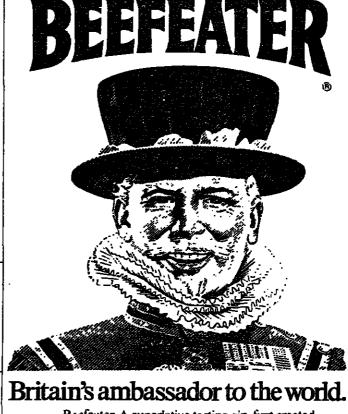

The government says it views the ceiling on prices for food as a strategy aimed at a "controlled in-flation of 16 percent annually, instead of 21 percent to 22 percent at present." Other of Mr. Spadolini's projects are to cut government expenses, step up productive invest-ments and — the most ticklish issue of all — revise the escalator clause that ues all wage rates to the consumer price index. The unions have already warned they are dead set against any tampering with the indexation of wages.

While the government is trying to keep food prices down, it is about to raise postal rates and the fees for other public services. It is all part of the sting.

How Not to Balance It

Thrashing around in the grip of the budget, the Reagan administration is reaching toward a couple of wildly misguided remedies. With the support of the Republican congressional leadership, the White House is talking about impoundment legislation. Impoundment means letting the president decide which appropriations to spend, and which not to spend. It's the line-item veto of appropriations that many presidents have sought. But Congress has refused it, recognizing it to be a massive transfer to the presidency of the constitutional power - and responsibility — to set spending policy.

For Sen. Howard Baker of Tennesee and Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois to encourage this idea is an astonishing abdication. It amounts to saying that the congressional Republicans want further cuts in the budget but not by them. They don't want their fingerprints to be found anywhere around the scene of the next round of cutting. They want the deed done far from them, over at the White House, behind closed curtains.

This dodge not merely would be craven on the part of Congress, but would also mean an important shift in the balance between the two branches of government. To see the implications, you have only to recall recent history. President Nixon claimed the authority to impound, and used it vigorously and illegally in the early 1970s, a period in which the presidency's assertions of its rights and powers had swollen dangerously out of measure. The courts told Mr. Nixon to stop it, and Congress wrote, in the Budget Reform Act of 1974, an orderly and reasonable procedure to rescind unneeded appropriations. That rescission process has been used effectively this year to cancel spending that Congress now considers excessive. But the procedure requires congressional votes, and that is what the Republican leaders are evidently trying to avoid

Meanwhile, a different sort of bad idea has emerged at the Pentagon, where officials are talking of a "sliding scale" of defense appropriations. They want to slide some of the increment in spending out past 1984 — the year when the president has pledged to balance the budget. Unlike impoundment, this one has no deep constitutional meaning. It's a mere fiscal fakery.

Balancing the budget briefly during a po-litical campaign will be meaningless, if everyone sees that a huge accumulation of spending commitments will roll into the budget immediately after the election. Abroad, the NATO allies of the United States - not to mention the Russians - would assume that the postponement meant a wavering of intentions here. But at home, the financial markets would foresee a ballooning of deficits beginning in 1985 and would discount any temporary gestures toward restraint. The administration's budget dilemma is genuine, and it is not going to be resolved by resorting to creative accounting.

The administration's dilemma is the result of a tax cut that was too large. This has left the United States with revenues inadequate to support both the defense effort that Mr. Reagan considers essential, and the domestic programs that Congress — even a conservative Congress with a Republican Senate considers essential. There is only one genuine solution, and that is to raise taxes again. As long as Mr. Reagan refuses to consider that possibility, the budget problem remains in-

'Guernica' Goes to Spain

Cn April 26, 1977, the 40th anniversary of the bombing of Guernica by the Heinkels, Junkers and Messerschmitts of Hitler's Condor Legion, the children of the town marked the event with drawings of death and destruction. With colored crayons on cheap paper they depicted dive bombers, burning houses and dying people. They were commemorating an attack that many historians have called the beginning of modern warfare - the carpet bombing of a town to destroy it and terrorize the rest of the country's population. In the year of the bombing, 1937, Picasso was commissioned by the embattled Spanish Republic to paint a picture for an exhibition in Paris. He, too, took Guernica as his text. He used surreal forms and cold shades of gray to etch the image permanently into the consciousness of mankind.

The moving of the painting from New York to Spain in 1981 is in accord with Picasso's wish that it be put on view in the country of his birth only after the death of Franco and the restoration of personal liberties. The conditions have been met. Franco has been dead for almost six years and Spaniards are free. But that freedom is still tenuous, and as a result, the arrival of "Guernica" is steeped in irony. For one thing, the powerful Spanish army, units of which came close to overthrowing the government in February, is still led to a large extent by officers who fought with Franco during the Civil War of 1936 to 1939. To them, Guernica was a step on the way to winning the war that kept Spain from succumbing to Godless Communism. The town also contains the oak tree that symbolizes special Basque rights and, by extension, autonomy, which the army abhors. The greatest provocation may be that it will call attention to today's Basque nationalist terrorists.

So there will be mixed feelings about the arrival of "Guernica." But mostly, it should be understood as confirmation that for six years Spain has lived up the condition set by Picasso. It also has a terrible resonance that extends far beyond Spain's borders. The Spanish Civil War was a laboratory for World War II and the Guernica bombing, so fearsome at the time, may well have been a key experiment. But weaponry has come a long way since the 500-pound bombs of 1937. The great fear, now, is that should there be similar experiment with today's bombs, 40 years later there will be no children to commemorate the event.

Question of Radiation

Thirty-six years after atomic bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the grim business of cataloging the effects of radiation on the survivors goes on. Thanks to the extraordinary cooperation of these individuals and their offspring, some good is coming from the horror. Scientists are able, for the first time, to study the effects of radiation, not on a mice or monkeys, but on human beings. According to a newly published summary of work that has been under way since 1946, the good news is that humankind appears to be considerably less susceptible to genetic damage from radiation than had been thought and than existing radiation safety standards allow for.

The setting of safe levels for human exposure to nuclear radiation, chemicals or similar hazards must of necessity rely on extrapolation from animal studies or on the results of prior "accidental" human exposures. Cases where statistically large enough numbers of people have been exposed to the same risk. where the group can all be found, and where confounding factors are not overwhelming, are extremely rare. In these respects, the atomic homb survivors are unique.

The latest results, published this week in Science magazine, only concern one of the possible kinds of damage from radiation genetic damage that affects the offspring of those who are exposed. Effects on the exposed individual - such as induction of cancer - are not involved. The evidence from Hiroshima-Nagasaki comes from such things as birth defects and stillbirths, death during childhood and other indicators of genetic mutation. The data show an astonishingly low level of genetic damage. In this one respect, humanity appears to be about four times as resistant to radiation as mice - the experimental animal on which current standards for human exposure are based.

No other common hazard has proved as difficult to pin down as radiation. Despite dozens of studies and research projects, the question of what is a "safe" level of exposure remains mired in conflict. In an editorial accompanying the report, one of its authors, Prof. James Neel, is putting it mildly when he notes that the new results will "elicit discussion." Despite the lack of other exposed human groups as potentially informative as the Japanese survivors, Prof. Neel argues that because public concern is so great every possible source of human data should be studied. He proposes that a "blue-ribbon committee" be appointed to study the mat-

Whether - given the current level of understanding of biological mechanisms - additional studies would clarify or confuse, seems an open question. Nevertheless, considering the great value of resolving this anxiety-producing issue, the suggestion deserves

God and Jonah at Yale: Getting It Right

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON — The prophet Jonah, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, A. Bartlett Giamatti and William F. Buckley Jr.: what an unlikely melange. But there they all were the other day, mixed up together in an entertaining and instructive episode — more instructive than at least one of them knew.

Mr. Giamatti, the president of Yale, began it with a speech to freshmen criticizing the Moral Majority, the fundamentalist political movement led by Mr. Falwell. He said that it and like groups were using "old intimidation and new technology" in "a radical assault" on diversity and freedom in the United-

Using television, direct mail and economic boycott, they would sweep before them anyone who holds a different opinion ...

Made His Mark

Mr. Buckley, who first made his mark 30 years ago with "God and Man at Yale," could not remain silent about such heresy at his alma mater. He wrote a column in disa-greement with Mr. Giamatti, asking rhetori-cally: "Is it really his position that people reading the Bible are not free to enjoin its

Then Mr. Buckley fastened on a particular Giamatti phrase, the one about the conservative politico-religious groups being "angry at change." Invoking the Bible to argue that there was nothing wrong with anger, he quoted from the Book of Jonah:
"And God said to Jonah, Doest thou well to be angry?" And he said, I do well to be

But it is a great mistake to quote the Bible mless you have at least a dim sense of what it is about. Mr. Buckley evidently did not most beautiful and moving passages. He got the message of the Book of Jonah exactly backwards. And it is a message with much contemporary significance.

The Book of Jonah is known mostly for the "great fish," as the King James version calls it, that swallows the prophet. But the real point of the story, and its beauty, lies

Trying to Escape

Jonah takes his ill-fated voyage in trying to escape a command of God: to go to the city of Nineveh and preach that it will be destroyed because of wickedness. After God saves him from the fish, Jonah goes as or-dered and predicts Nineveh's overthrow in word of God, and fasted, and furned from evil. And God saw them and forgave them. He did not destroy the city.

"But it displeased Jonah exceedingly," the Bible says, "and he was very angry." He told God that that was exactly why he had tried to avoid the assignment, because he foresaw that God would be too soft-hearted to carry out the promise of destruction: "For I knew that thou art a gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil."

Then Jonah went out of Nineveh and waited to see what would happen. God made a gourd grow — the Douay Version calls it my — to give Jonah some shade. But the next day God caused the vine to wither, and the sun beat on Jonah's head until he fainted. And then God asked, "Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd?" And Jonah answered, "I do well to be angry, even unto death."

Loss of Face

How petty is Jonah's anger, how selfish, how unworthy. Loss of face is not reason enough to be angry unto death: the death not of Jonah, after all, but of the people of

That is the point of the Book of Jonah: that humanity matters more than abstrac-tions, that the true spirit of God is not relentless moralizing but forgiveness. And so today, if our secular society is to work, it must have not angry certainties but a willingness to respect the common humanity of people with different views.

"Then said the Lord," the Book of Jonah concludes, "Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not labored. neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night: And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right. and their left hand; and also much cattle?"

Italy: The Quest to Find a Government

By William Pfaff

FLORENCE — There is a 15th-Century Florentine story, with a basis in fact, of a morbid trick played upon a woodworker named Manetti degli Ammannatini by his painter friends. They insist to him that he only imagines that he is himself, and by a series of tricks strength, or conviction of weakand maneuvers they eventually reduce him to a state of frightened confusion in which he will not go home for fear of finding that Manetti degli Ammannatini is already there. "If he is there," he asks, "what will I do?"

This story can be taken as a model of alienation, but also of the effect of belief upon reality. Given a political significance, it suggests that societies are, or are not, what they think they are.

Apocalypse, Anyone?

----Letters-

As a daily reader of your newspaper, I was struck by three recent-ly reported items that could por-tend an approaching religious war of international dimensions. This "War of the Prophets" will likely pit the true believers and followers of Jesus Christ against those of Mohammed, Marx and Lenin.

First, in your article, "Image of Coin on Shroud Advanced as Proof of Authenticity" (IHT, Sept. 3), one sees one more case, among many, where science itself, is back-ing the traditional claims of the Church concerning Christ's role as Prophet, Lawgiver and Redeemer. For, by proving the authenticity of the Shroud of Turin, science will be confirming the Passion, Death and Resurrection of the historical figure of Jesus. The consequences are enormous ...

Second, in your report, "Vatican Reported To Suspect KGB in Pope Shooting" (IHT, Sept.4), one is impressed with the surfacing connection between the Moslem assassin and Soviet Russia's secret police, the KGB, as well as with the May 13 date of the shooting.

As millions already know, May 13 was the day of the first of sever-al apparitions of the Virgin Mary at Fatima, Portugal, in 1917. She accurately predicted: that Russia would spread its errors throughout the world (international Communism), fomenting wars and per-secuting the church; World War II; famine; martyrdom for many people; and a universal punishment that would witness the annhilation of various nations. She confirmed these timely predictions with a public miracle on October 13, 1917, that was witnessed by over 70,000 persons present at Fa-tima on the appointed day of the great prodigy.

As for the Moslems, their 20th Century scimitar is their oil wealth. They can, at will, bring the industrialized economies of Japan and the West to its knees by the turn of a faucet. Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini and Libva'a Moamer Qadhafi have done much to terrorize nations attempting to live under the principles of international law. Although we don't care, they have not forgotten the Crusades. Third, your week-end review, "For Some Light Reading, Try an Apocalypse," (IHT, Sept. 5-6) seems to be a confirmation of the above observations. That the predictions of Nostradamus should have the French so excited, as Jean Charles de Fontbrune's runaway bestseller confirms, is a phenome non that calls for serious reflec-ARTHUR DENCHFIELD 3d.

Everyone knows that the Italian economy is a miracle of improvisation and individual initiative more often than not exercised in the "black," which is to say outside the framework of social charges, restraints, and thus outside declared statistics and the official gross national product (which, nonetheless, is itself, in its rate of growth, consistently one of the highest in the industrial world.)

Economic Dynamism

Italy's economic dynamism has never seriously faltered since the war. But as so much of it is irregular and extra-legal, it has to be apologized for by Italians. Italian pride in what has been accomplished always is mixed with a discernable self-contempt, a bitterness that it could not all have been done properly and conven-

One reason the French presently are disliked in Italy is that French efficiency and effective government is taken by the Italia reproach. Why can't Italians, too, have governors who govern, planners who plan, a civil administra-tion which makes everything One of Mussolini's ministers remarked, in the heyday of Italian Fascism, that "Italians like to be loved, but they like better to be feared and envied." Exactly. Since the ephemeral experience of Fas-cism, when a rhetorical inflation of the state, and pompous claims of Roman imperial mission, led to a squalid catastrophe, Italians have had to content themselves with being loved. This is wearing. Mil-lions of foreigners crowd the coun-try every summer and tell the Italians how charming they are, inci-dentally emphasizing to Italians how much more impressive they find the country's past than its

Cruel History

Florence, after all, is a city of cruel history, Tuscany is a place of war, treachery, and genius. Mod-em politics and political philosophy were invented here, together with perspective, the techniques of oil painting, modern literature, the keeping of statistics, a scientific view of the universe, opera, the secular sensibility — the modern world itself (a not unmixed good, as Mary McCarthy severely obscrves.)

But the Florentines now make shoes, handbags, optical equip-ment, light machinery, and novel-ties for the trampling invasion of tourists. The Uffizi museum itself, once the office of government, is marked with graffiti in all known languages, while its gallery shelters sidewalk portraitists, souvenir peddiers, and a representative encampment of the shaggy and stoned teen-age population of northern Europe. One concludes that a little fear and cavy could improve the morale of the Florentines no end. It would improve Italian morale. That is, after all, one of the things the terrorists in their murderous manner have been trying to say: that Italy should be hard, revolutionary, pitiless, unlovable. Their message has in it much the same things the Fascists were saying in The Fascists, too, wanted to bury the Italy of museums, tombs, and tourists, to substitute a modern Italy of dynamos, zeppelins, electric railroads, tanks, colonies, and marching armies. The Italian people were responsive—up to a people were responsive — up to a

Creativity

The truth is that Italy possesses too much creativity, too much in-tellectual and aesthetic originality, too much energy, for the political framework within which it functions. These qualities warp and strain that framework, and Italian society in turn is distorted and Garibaldi, Cavour, and the Risorgimento meant to give to fragmented 19th-century Italy a modern national structure, so that it could become like France, Germany, and Britain. For many reasons, that effort has failed. The failure has as its legacy the essential problem of contemporary Ita-ly, still unresolved, without sight of resolution, which is how, and where, to find a government. $1981, International Revold Tribune.

Six Golden Apples

By William Safire

WASHINGTON - Here's good news: You don't have to break your head trying to figure out whether or not we should go back on the gold standard. Nor do you have to add the "Eurodollar overhang" to your list of worries, or wonder if opening the "gold window" while the "window of vulnerability" is still open will cause a military draft.

Let the supply-side economists deliver learned diatribes at the deliver learned charibes at the strange-bedfellow combination of Keynesians and Friedmanites, opeding us to their heart's content. Let stagflationists blaze back, calling supply-side's golden follow-up to a tax cut "Phase II of Voodoo Economics." In the end, right or wrong, we shall have a dollar once again, convertible into gold at a again convertible into gold at a fixed price.

That outcome is predetermined by a mysterious symbiosis called the Eco-Political Media Process (EPMP). Adoption of the gold standard meets EPMP's needs in these ways:

1. It feeds the media monster. When a few zealots take on a sizable intellectual establishment, the media's need to be "evenhanded" causes journalists to exaggerate the importance of the noisy minority.
Accordingly, simplified television analysis of the controversy must and weight to the gold bug's cause.

2. It satisfies the executive need to act. Tying the dollar to a fixed price of gold would take power from the Federal Reserve Board and force both Congress and the and force both Congress and the president to observe stricter antiinflation discipline.

3. It reinvigorates the true believers. Tax-cutting and a return to the discipline of a fixed standard for the dollar — and not budgetfor the dollar — and not bugget-cutting — was the essence of Reaganomics at the Republican Convention, and both found a place in the platform. Under the influence of the "graybeards" — traditionalist conservatives fearful of high deficits — supply-side's gold trumpet was muted in the campaign.

4. It attracts the right opposi-tion. The discredited Keynesians, sulking in the shadows of the demand side, have seized on the re-turn to gold as the essence of

 It tickles the philosophical fancy of the man at the Cabinet table whose chair is slightly larger than the others. Mr. Reagan stands for disinflation without recession, which nobody believes, and that disbelief holds interest rates high; what could be better for long-range confidence than the legal mooring of gold notes?

The story, then, is not in the merits of gold's case — nobody knows if it would work wonders for stability, or would do to the 1980s what the Smoot-Hawley Tariff did to the 1930s.

The story is the way that six youngish men - not one a housethese elements to embark the nation on a course that the vast majority of economists and bankers thought was out of the question only a year ago.

One is Arthur Laffer, he of the now-famous curve, an ebullient economic genius called "Lil Ar-thur" by his detractors to differentiate him from "Big Arthur"

Another is the go longer obscure Jude Wanniski, a former Wall Street Journal editorialist who became the publicity mastermind for the supply-siders; this intense, persuasive writer and speaker is the Brillat-Savarin of the free lunch. The third of these golden apples is Jeff Bell, a onetime Reagan aide who stimued politicians by unseating Sen. Clifford Case in a primary three years ago.

In the House, Rep. Jack Kemp, a Republican of Buffalo, N.Y., has a Republican of Burano, N. Y., has been the leading supply-sider, differing with the Stockman suffering scenario, plumping for gold. He probably thinks he can run for president directly from the House, which New York's Gov. Hugh Carey and Sen. Pat Moynihan will be glad to hear, but nobody has made that leap without being elect-ed to the Senate since James Polk, and he had been speaker. The lesser-known congressional golden ap-ple is Republican Rep. Ron Paul of Houston.

Finally, Lewis Lehman, a New York businessman, has been peppering the papers with literate projections of a glittering economy. With Mr. Kemp staying in Washington, he will run for New York York governor waving the stan-dard standard, to which the wise and honest can repair.

Will their brilliant EPMP camaign succeed? The odds are 16 to 1 in favor — their triumph will be limited, but significant. Evidence comes from an authentic White House insider, who says "Ronald Reagan wears one of those Corum watches — you know the kind, with the face made of a $20 gold piece? Every time the president checks to see what time it is — maybe 30, 40 times a day — he gets reminded to do something about the gold standard."

Roughing It With Lauren and Reagan

ational Herald Tribune

EW YORK - President N Reagan goes to the ranch and the fashion industry comes up with a new denominator. Recently in New York, designer Ralph Lauren came up with a so-called Rough Wear line, inspired by the supposedly down-to-earth simplicity and homespun virtues of life on the ranch.

"Very family, very country, rugged, dirty, utility, washes out," is the way Lauren describes it. In essence, Rough Wear is very much related to the Reaganite atmosphere of back to the roots. In terms of fashion, what it boils down to is updated and upgraded Army-and-Navy-store farm clothes.

Saddle as Centerpiece

Asked if the president had influenced his new line, Lauren, who was wearing a black West-can shirt and cowboy boots in his midtown Manhattan office, which had a huge Western show saddle as centerpiece, said: "I think that he certainly is expressing something that he personally does and I think a lot of people admire him. Certainly it's a very wonderful atmosphere.

Lauren, who started as a tie buyer at Bloomingdale's, went on his own 13 years ago and built a $300-million wholesale business designing ultra-classic men's wear based on Irish tweeds, cashmeres and corduroys. He once defined it, somewhat tongue-in-cheek, as "clothes for people who wanted to go to prep school but couldn't."

Then he went on to designing for women and children as well. One of his major coups was updating American folklore with his Western gear. Now, he has gone one step further into revamping basic work clothes for city folk who want to get away from it all. Rugged clothes such as those worn by farmers, fishermen, hunters or oil workers are now turned out by Lauren with better fabrics and more colors. The prices are updated too pants that would be $10 to $15 at the Army and Navy Stores cost $40 to $50 in Lauren's new line, and jackets that Lauren sells for $110 would be $20 to $25 in the general store. By honing up the line. Lauren is making a fashion statement as well

Lauren said Rough Wear answers the needs of a new dimension in city people's lifestyles.
"In the clothes that I have been designing over the years, I have always believed that men and women have different styles and do many different things today. I feel that people want to go to the country, want to go for a farm-style life. Look at the truck business. People are driving a lot more trucks, it's not only the farmers who are driving trucks. City people are into more rugmore utilitarian things. ged, more utilitarian things. Trocks, vans, four-wheel drives. There's a much broader dimension to what people are doing.

"They're more active, and I am not talking just of running.

"They're more active, and I am that has a feeling of outdoors, privacy, no cars, that's what I besion to what people are doing.

They're going out West, at least in this country I sense there's a feeling of people wanting to go to the West, and that's the kind of clothes that they need.

As for the difference between sportswear and Rough Wear. Rough Wear is much more rustic," Lauren said. "It's the kind of clothes that have a style in that they look better as they get older, washed out. But at the same time they are priced so that they are not treated as precious jewels. They're the kind that you can throw into the washing machine and are good, functional

'Rugged Look'

Does Lauren think that it's the beginning of a new, wide-open fashion field? "I think that it's a trend that young people relate to very well. It's an extension of a non-fashion rugged look that I think that men have always relatlieve in and I think people really need that now. That's where they started in this country, and that's portant, this sort of going back to pioneer spirit.'

Judging from the current craze for Western boots on European shores, Lauren may well have a future outside America. The British, anyhow, will have the first crack when he opens his first European boutique at Brown's of London on Sept. 24. Owner Joan Burstein, who has been following American designers for years and already has a Calvin Klein boutique, said: "I feel that Lauren captures the essence of American folklore but couples this with superb tailoring.

Sadler's Sherilyn Kennedy Is Thrust Into Spotlight

By Noel Goodwin International Herald Tribune

ONDON - It now seems accepted that the Sadler's Wells Royal Ballet will keep a quite separate identity from the Royal Ballet at Covent Garden. Whether this is preferable to some degree of mutual association is debatable in light of the pressures caused by an injury to one of the Sadler's Wells company's top ballerinas at the beginning of its current season.

Before a foot was set on the stage, the Sadler's Wells company announced that it would be without Marion Tait, who was suffering a stress fracture in one fool. This put unexpected pressure on the company's New Zealand-born principal, Sherilyn Kennedy, already preparing a debut in the demanding title role of Sir Frederick Ashton's "La Fille mai gardée" this weekend. She took extra roles in place of Tait on the first three nights of the season, which runs to Sept. 19. The Covent Garden troupe does not resume until Oct.

Literary Reference

She succeeded notably well as the central girl in "Night Moves," one of several recent new ballets by the young choreographer David Bintley premiered earlier this year. Then it seemed that the ballet did not show individual dancers to best advantage, but now that the work has secured a place in the season's repertory, several featured dancers have begun to find mon in it.

What remains problematic is Bintley's reason for attaching to a mostly buoyant and cheerful suite of dances a decidedly pessimistic quotation from Anna Akhmatova, including the line: "The night falls without the hope of dawn." If he intended some literary content it does not emerge in performance, which takes its character from the varied music of Benjamin Britten's Frank Bridge Variations," and includes an attractive Spanish-style dance for Petal Miller. Kennedy also danced a spirited and flowing account of the solo waltz in the opening "Les Syl-phides," where Margaret Barbieri and Desmond Kelly brought romantic style to their pas de deux. No less rewarding on this occasion was the polished ensemble of the corps de ballet, who looked as if they had been given some fresh in-sight into the ballet's poetic char-

Would that the orchestral playing had done the same for Chopin. but this was gentle compared to the appalling treatment meted out to the long-suffering tunesmiths of "Le Corsaire," Minkus and Drigo. While Galina Samsova successfully radiated brilliance with sensitivity in the showcase pas de deux.

wary at attempting such unaccustomed bravura, the orchestra under Barry Wordsworth was made to sound like a circus band.

Almost like a new ballet is Ashton's "Sinfonietta," which has been given new designs by Peter Rice in place of the moving light projections of its original decor in 1967. Neither design nor music (by Malcolm Williamson) greatly enriches the choreography which, in the central "Elegy" movement (where the absent Tait was smoothly replaced by Christine Aitken), extends the lustrous beauty of Ashton's just-previous Monotones." The outer movements afford the kind of challenge that young dancers enjoy.

Three good reasons for investing in the German equity market via UNIFONDS now:

First

The overall market level is still low and leading stocks appear cheap, reflecting the tailendperformance of the German stock market in 1979 and 1980 in comparison with major international markets.

Second

Since the beginning of this decade the Deutschmark has depreciated approx. 40 per cent against the US-Dollar, more than discounting adverse developments in the German economy and disregarding a turn to the better in some key areas. By investing now you benefit from the dual opportunity of a low market and an overly depressed currency.

UNIFONDS represents a very suitable vehicle to take advantage of this investment scenario.

BUSINESS NEWS BRIEFS Weidenbaum Urges Faster Growth In Money Supply to Hit Fed's Goal

Washington Past Service WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, its entire economic program being jeopardized by con-tinuing high interest rates, would like to see somewhat faster growth in the most closely watched measure of the money supply, the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers has said. The chairman, Murray L. Weidenbaum, stressed Wednesday that the administration has no quarrel with the Federal Reserve's targets for growth of the money supply. However, the level of M1-which includes currency in circulation and checking deposits at financial institutions, has remained below the Fed's target range for some time, Mr. Weiden-baum said, and the administration would like to see the M1-B growth rate back up to at least the lower part of that range.

[Anthony Solomon, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, said Thursday in a speech in Niagara Falls, N.Y., that money supply growth had been brought under reasonably good control and remained basically on target for the year, Renters reported.

He said the Federal Reserve did not expect to meet money and credit targets with any precision on a short-term basis, and added that the introduction of new financial instruments such as negotiable order-of-withdrawal accounts and money market funds with checkwriting privileges made it unusually difficult to interpret the behavior of the money supply.]

Mr. Weidenbaum said that despite the unexpectedly high level of interest rates, the administration has not revised the economic forecast it published in July, which predicted faster economic growth

Prices on Wall Street In Broad-Based Rally

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange staged a broad-based rally Thursday after being blitzed the past few months because of high interest rates. Trading was moderately active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which gained 2.76 points in Wednesday's abbreviated session, gained 8.56 points to close at 862.44. It had been up about 10 points at one point.

Advances led declines, 1,149-413, among the 1,895 issues traded on the New York exchange and volume expanded to 47.43 million shares, compared with 43.81 million traded Wednesday when the market closed a half hour early because of a power failure.

Prices were higher in moderate trading of American Stock Ex-change issues.

Analysts said that because the Dow average had fallen about 170 points since mid-June, the market was set for a rally involving bargain hunting and investors replac-ing shares sold earlier.

Observers said the market's surge appeared to be a carryover from the upturn that began late in Wednesday's session.

They said this was because there still was very little investor support for the higher levels, except in the very short end of the market. Still, an easing of the federal funds rate to 16% percent and lower financing costs of around 15% percent provided technical support for the market.

in analyzing the manic-depressive behavior of investors, our editors subscribe to the adage that the "more things change, the more they remain the same." In the past, our readers have mocked conventional moods, buying stocks during "down" markets, realizing substantial profits once the market railied and feelings became cuphoric.

We pose a number of questions, What does BO DEREK have in common with Wall Street Bulls? Are steel stocks about to regain their virility? Additionally, we focus on an emerging natural resource equity that is going public; a company that is accruing cash flow from productive oil and gas wells, having among its assets a 49% interest in 360,000 acres of leaseholds adjacent to a new area being tested in Eastern Canada by CHEVRON STANDARD and partners. In other categories, we discuss a SAVINGS & LOAN company that could dely the industry, making a dramatic upside breakout, doubling or tripling from its $14 level; and a number of oversold stocks, including SHELL TRANSPORT. BOEING, MEMOREX and CENERAL DYNAMICS; each appears fiscally enticing.

Reagan Considering Retaliation If Canadians Limit U.S. Investment

By Jane Scaberry on Post Service

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration is a considering tough retaliatory sanctions against the Canadian government if it goes ahead with nationalization plans aimed at limiting U.S. investment in Canada Actions under consideration range from abandoning the U.S.-Canada auto pact to granting the president emergency powers to eliminate or alter any trade agreement between the two countries.

The actions being considered resulted from a review ordered by the Cabinet at a meeting last month, administration sources said Wednesday. At that meeting the Commerce Department and the U.S. trade representative were asked to come up with a list of possible sanctions.

The Canadian government was posified of the White House study here Tuesday during consultations on Ottawa's "Canadianization"

'Serious Concern'

Canadian Embassy spokesman Wednesday acknowledged the meeting with administration officials but said it would be hard for the White House to design a pro-gram to hurt Canada without also hurting the United States. He said the talks were continuing and that he expected them to produce satisfactory results.

administration to stand between Canada and Congress," said Raymond J. Waldmann, assistant secretary of commerce for international economic policy.

The administration has set no timetable for determining what ac-tion it might take, Mr. Waldmann said, "but we felt it was important to let [the Canadians] know now."

"There's still an opportunity" for Canada "to look at what they're trying to achieve through these measures and consider the interests of other commies," Mr. Waldmann added: "The president is interested in harmony with Canada, yet we have this incident

that's in the way."

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elfior Trudeau and his Liberal Party were re-elected last year on a platform promising increased Canadian control of the economy, especially in energy.

Mr. Trudeau has proposed a new energy policy designed to re-duce foreign ownership of the oil and gas industry from 72 to 50 percent by 1990 and to make Canada self-sufficient in energy.

Mr. Trudeau also has proposed tighter controls on non-energy subsidiaries of foreign companies op-erating in Canada. U.S. companies have complained that the proposals are aimed primarily at them. Nearly 80 percent of foreign investments in Canada are con-trolled by U.S. interests.

Pending Legislation

In addition to the possible U.S. administration sanctions, legisla-tion is pending in Congress to force a moratorium on Canadian investment in the United States and stiffen financial requirements for Canadian companies attempting to acquire U.S. companies, Mr.

would enable Harvester to gain much ground in its effort to repay $1.2 billion in debt due by 1984.

The company has said it expected to complete a refinancing of the $4.9 billion owed to its banks by

Oct. 31.
"Harvester's problems require a multitude of solutions in which cost-cutting plays an important but a minor role," said Eli S. Lost-garten, a vice president of Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins.

Waldmann said He said the White House is considering throwing its support behind that legislation.

He added that Congress is pressuring the administration to invoke the Mineral Lands Leasing Act, which prohibits a foreign company from leasing federal land for mineral development unless that country reciprocates. The secretary of the interior can declare Canada "non-reciprocal."

Mr. Waldmann said the administration was not trying to act as a big brother telling Canada what to do, but he acknowledged that it was "finger-twisting."

The most far-reaching option being considered by the White House would allow the U.S. government to initiate an investigation under Section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974. That, after a government determination, could give the presBecause the clause has been invoked so rarely, administration officials are not sure whether the president's powers are restricted to the trade arena. "The powers are pretty broad," Mr. Waldmann

The determination that Canada violated an agreement or conduct-ed unjustifiable trade practices must be backed by evidence, which the Commerce Department is gathering. Several weeks ago, the Commerce Department mailed to the executives of the Fortune 500 companies a questionnaire asking them what problems they have had with the Canadian government, Mr. Waldmann said.

Another issue clouded by the administration's review is the U.S.-Canadian auto pact, which the Canadians have said they want renegotiated to provide more benemostly divisions of U.S. companies. "Without the agreement, nies. most of production would be in the United States," Mr. Wald-

The review will determine "what position to take on future economic relations," Mr. Waldmann said. We're saying should we have more of those agreements or fewer of those agreements?

U.S. Raises Forecast Of Coffee Production

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Agriculture Department Thursday raised its forecast for world coffee production in the 1981-82 season from 95.3 million bags, up from 94.2 million bags that were fore-cast initially and up by 11.7 million bags from output in the previ-ous season. Each bag is 60 kilograms (132 pounds).

Capital Spending Survey

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Business officials are stepping up their plans for spending on new plants and equipment this year, but that is mostly due to higher prices caused by inflation, the govern-ment reported Thursday.

A Commerce Department survey in late July and August found nonfarm businesses estimating their capital investment this year would be about $321.5 billion, or 8.8 percent more than last year, the an operating loss of $168.3 million in the quarter ended July 31, is expected by many analysts to lose close to $500 million in its 1981 fiscal year. Its sales are expected to be about $6.5 billion, compared with $8.4 billion in 1980.

Forecasts of a return to profita-bility by early 1982 had been made earlier this year by company executives. But sustained high interest rates have punctured anticipated and have inflicted higher than anticipated debt payments. As a re-sult, many analysts are troubled about Harvester's ability to sur-

The company said the biggest effect of consolidating the divi-sions would be among its accounting, data processing, communica-tions and personnel departments.

lts three divisions will now include a manufacturing group, re-sponsible for all manufacturing at Harvester's 27 North American plants; a truck group, responsible for sales and marketing and over-seas manufacturing; and an equip-ment group responsible for all ag-ricultural and construction equip-ment, sales and marketing and overseas manufacturing.

According to a news agency report, Harvester plans to introduce a new tractor with an electronically synchronized transmission next Monday in Kansas City, Mo. The transmission is said to be quieter and stronger than existing ones, and some analysts have said that the tractor could help Harvester's sales next year.

But Mr. Lustgarten said that new sources of capital and lower interest rates would be a much greater help to the company than new sales that might come from new products.

"Harvester has always had good products and it has good distribu-tion," Mr. Lustgarten said. "That has never been its problem. It desperately needs new sources of capi-tal and a revival of demand for its

Former Carter Aide Warns Of Sharp Decline for Dollar

By William J. Eaton Los Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON - The assistant secretary of the Treasury in the Carter administration has predicted that the value of the dollar would drop sharply later this year or early in 1982, slowing U.S. eco-nomic growth and adding to the rate of inflation.

The official, C. Fred Bergsten, told reporters Wednesday that President Reagan's economic program and the resulting record-high interest rates would bring a huge deficit in the U.S. balance of trade within the next 12 months.

Mr. Bergsten accused the Reagan administration of "malign neglect" of the impact of domestic economic policies on other nations. He said the Treasury should have intervened to prevent the sharp rise in the value of the dollar

Record interest rates, Mr. Bergsten said, have already produced "an amazing overvaluation of the dollar against all currencies," with an increase of about 25 percent in the dollar's value in the last eight months.

That will mean a "tremendous loss" in the ability of U.S. exports to compete with the products of West Germany, Japan and other nations whose currencies have dropped in relation to the dollar, Mr. Bergsten said.

As a result, he predicted, the deficit in the U.S. balance of trade on a current account basis would double or triple within a year. The dollar inevitably will plummet later this year or early next year," Mr. Bergsten said at a breakfast sponsored by Foreign Policy magazine. His article on "The Costs of Reaganomics" appeared in the fall issue of the

Guthrie, Sime Darby Deal Called Logical by Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR —A merger between the Guthrie plantation group, taken over by a Malaysian government corporation this week, and its leading rival Sime Darby would be logical, says Malaysia's finance minister.

Wednesday that a merger would help consolidate the rubber and palm oil industries and increase efficiency, but he gave no indication of when it might happen. Asked to comment on criticism in London that the Guthrie takeover was nationalization by the back door. Mr. Tengku Razaleigh said it was "a commercial transaction following the normal rules of

3. Certain or all of the class action claims are asserted against G+W, certain officers and present and former directors of G+W and Ernst & Ernst (now Ernst & Whinney) (collectively, the "Class Action Defendants"). The derivative action claims are asserted on behalf and for the benefit of G+W against the Class Action Defendants other than G+W and against Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company.

The defendants assert that all of plaintiffs' claims are without merit and have denied and continue to deny all charges of wrongdoing or liability whatsoever.

5. The parties to the Weinberger action and the State Court Actions have reached settlements detailed in a Stipulation of Settlement as follows: in full settlement of the derivative action claims, defendants (other than G+W) shall cause to be paid to G+W the aggregate sum of $450,000; in full settlement of the class claims, and upon the receipt by G+W of the monies referred to above, G+W shall pay into a settlement fund (the "Settlement Fund") the aggregate sum of $4,000,000.

6. You are a member of the class certified by the Court for purposes of this settlement (the "Weinberger Class") if, at any time during the period from October 21, 1969, to July 22, 1977, inclusive the "Class Period"), you acquired G+W Equity Securities by either (i) purchase in the open market. (ii) conversion of other G+W securities or exercise of G+W sarrants into or for G+W common stock, or iii) exchange of other securities for G+W Equity Securities in connection with mergers involving subsidiaries of G+W and Simon & Schuster. Inc.. Kayser-Roth Corporation or Marquette Company, and thereafter continuously held such G+W Equity Securities through July 22, 1977. Excluded from the Weinberger Class are (i) the Class Action Defendants and members of their respective immediate families and (ii) present and former officers and directors of G+W who held any such position with G+W at any time during the Class Period and members of their respective immediate families.

7. If you are a class member and you file a valid proof of claim in accordance with the procedures set forth in the detailed printed notice and proof of claim, you may be entitled to participate in the Settlement Fund, net of court awarded counsel fees and disbursements, in accordance with the formulas set forth in the detailed printed notice. Proofs of claim and supporting documents must be mailed by first class mail and postmarked no later than January 11, 1982.

8. Each member of the Weinberger Class shall be bound by the proposed settlement in the event it is approved by the Court, and by any judgment or determination of the Court affecting the Weinberger Class, unless such member shall mail, by first class mail, a written request for exclusion from the Weinberger Class, costmarked no later than October 23, 1981, addressed to the Clerk, United States District Court. Post Office Box 5328, F.D.R. Station, New York, New York 10150, and referring on the envelope to Weinberger, et al. v. Gulf & Western Industrics, Inc., et al., 77 Civ. 3569 (ADS). Any request for exclusion shall not be effective unless made in the manner set forth in the detailed printed notice and within the time provided for herein. If a member of the Weinberger Class requests to be excluded, he or it will not receive any benefits provided for in the Stipulation of Settlement in the event it is approved by the Court.

10. YES, Fran Lebowitz is still funny in "Social Studies," even though she's no longer poor. She's not always funny, of course, but even S.J. Perelman wasn't. Most people, including writers, are hardly ever funny.

This second book may not have as many triumphant phrases as "Metro-politan Life" did. Perhaps hungry writers tend to chew on language more. It's one of the free entertainments, poor people's currency.

Money, Lebowitz observes, brings its own incongruities. It forces you into increasing contact with all the absurdities that can be bought. It gives you greater opportunities to betray yourself to yourself.

When Lebowitz is not furmy, it is often because she's either falling back on a formula — the negative inversion — or trying to bully us into assuming the presence of humor. Some unsuccessful pieces like "The Four Greediest Cases," "The Modern-Day Lives of the Saints," and "At Home With Pope Ron" are written in what might be called deadpan deadpan, based on the avant-garde notion that two negatives make a positive.

A Humor Pushcart

Her best piece is "The Last Laugh," a history of her career as a humorist. "I started," she says, "with a humor pushcart on Delancey Street essays, 40 cents apiece, four for a dol-lar." For a while she prospered, but then, she writes, "I took a bath with some barbed comments I was trying out, and then I got stuck with a lot of entertaining anecdotes."

"I tried everything. I ran big sales Buy one epigram, get one free.'

in, what chance did an independent like me have? Sol's Discount Satire opened up right across the street. He wrote in bulk; I couldn't meet his Lebowitz is daring. One senses that she would like to be even more daring, if it were not for the big humor chains. Her piece against animal pets is a good example. It's not a fresh idea, it wasn't even when W.C. Fields used it, but she does give it a wonder-ful turn. When people protest to her that the blind and the pathologically lonely need dogs, she says, "Let the lonely lead the blind."

It's a line in which humor and pathos wrestle like Jacob and the angel. One can imagine it — the lonely leading the blind — but only in a much more interesting world than ours. Animal lovers, Lebowitz suggests, should get an entourage instead of a den "You do not have to write the of a dog, "You do not have to walk an entourage; on the contrary, one of the major functions of an entourage is that it walks you."

Wky Not?

Inspecting a $1,400 apartment, the author asks the agent why the refriger-ator is in the living-room instead of the kitchen. The agent points out that it won't fit into the kitchen. Then why not, Lebowitz asks, fit the kitchen into the refrigerator?

as opposed to the evening, when she is out not writing She experiments with going out in the day. At first, it is interesting "A lot of places were open, and it was undeniably well-lit." Objections

A young man arrives in answer to an ad for a maid. But he doesn't dust American furniture and will not dis-cuss his hourly rate: The author proposes a contribution to his favorite charity. Also, he has "every intention of coming to the house" during the day, when she is at home not writing,

"Nature and I have so little in com-mon," Lebowitz writes. "We don't go to the same restaurants, laugh at the same jokes, or, most significantly, see the same people."

In a piece on telephone operators, we learn all the objections to their saying "Is that 'B' as in boy?" There's the feminist objection, the black objection, the age discrimination objec-

Autumn is too limiting for Le-bowitz's taste. When people lose their summer color and turn yellow, you can't burn them like leaves. Also, she can't get used to all these Caucasians coming back to New York City.

That's the best thing about Lebowitz in "Social Studies": She never gets used to anything. She experiences customs and situations as if they were all done on purpose to her. And the funniest thing of all is that she's right.

'Mount Allegro,' An 'Ethnic Classic.' Will Be Reissued

New York Times Sei NEW YORK - In 1943, Houghton n Mifflin published "Mount Allegro" il by Jerre Mangione, an account of y growing up in a Sicilian neighborhood s in Rochester, N.Y. The book has since + had three other publishers and has i come out as both fiction and nonfic- y tion, as an adult book and as a book of for young adults.

Next month it will be reissued by I Columbia University Press and, in a what will be the third introduction to e the book, the sociologist Herbert J. Gans describes it as "a classic of American ethnic literature."

"The book was written as a nonfiction memoir and accepted as such by Houghton Mifflin," said Mangione, a professor of English at the University of Pennsylvania. "But a month or so before publication, they insisted on publishing it as fiction because their sales department decided it would sell-better with that label. I protested, but to no avail." "Mount Allegro" became a best seller briefly. Some bookstores stocked it as fiction, others as sociology or biography or humor. It was published by Alfred A. Knopf in 1952, with an introduction by Dorothy Can-field Fisher, and in Hill & Wang's American Centuries series in 1963. When Crown published it in 1972, in hard-cover and paperback editions aimed at the teen-age market, it carried an introduction by the former head of the New York Public Li-

This time, in hard cover and trade paperback, the book will have a subti-tie, "A Memoir of Italian American Life" — "so that," Mangione said, "there will be no mistake this time about its nonfictional content."

At this point, Wold could be res-sonably sure that there were 12 tricks available, counting seven trump

Since East had doubled the club cue-bid to ask for a lead in the suit,

West placed the club nine on the table. This was an unfortunate choice of card, for it made clear to declarer his right.

Wold won with the ace in dummy and dropped the jack from his hand. This was a mild false card, concealing the seven, and he could not have made this move if the nine had not already been played.

East had already struck trouble. On the previous trick, he had been forced to keep five cards in the minor suits and had therefore bared his spade king without any giveaway hesitation. After some thought, he led to the spade ace in dummy and dropped the

A MAN who is a strong candidate for the title of the world's most prolific bidding theorist is likely to be even more productive in the future. McEnroe Strains to Beat Krishnan

McEnroe, the defending champion, gasped his way to a 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory over Ramesh Krishnan Wednesday, surviving a genuine brush with disaster. He dropped the first set in a 12-10 tie break, uncharacteristically doublefaulting on set point.

His problems continued in the second set. He was disgusted, constantly berating himself for missing shots. He was angry, yelling at a fan who applauded a missed shot that his next shot would be directed at the fan. He was frustrated, muttering about Krishnan having "a 10-mile-an-hour serve."

Krishnan, 21, with superb touch on his ground strokes, was going for winners and making McEnroe look bad at times. "If you had told me before the match that I would be serving to go up two sets I would have told you that you were crazy." Krishnan said. "I just told myself to keep trying."

The two players reached 30-all and then McEnroe looped yet another weak forehand. Krishnan closed in for the kill but at the last moment decided to try a drop volley. It dropped into the net.

NEW YORK - Bill Riordan remembers how it all got started. "Ilie Nastase had just come over to this country from Romania," related the onetime tennis entrepreneur. "Ilie was playing a tournament in Macon, Ga. When he got there he saw Tomas Koch. the hippy Brazilian, playing in a brightly colored sunflower shirt.

Riordon organized the independent tour when it appeared that millionaire Lamar Hunt and his Dallas-based World Championship Tennis were going to take over the game. Riordan brought Nastase over from Romania, collared a promising young player named Connors and added Vitas Gerulaitis and the two Mayer brothers, Sandy and Gene.

"I was fortunate in having two world champions back to back," he said. "Nastase, who was num-ber-one in 1972, was one of the most naturally gifted players ever. Connors, of course, had a great streak, starting with his Wim-bledon and U.S. sweep in 1974." Riordan's Rascals were the scourge of tennis during the period. Hunt had to agree to a truce. Connors and Nastase were the most exciting figures in the game in the early and mid-1970s. They were uninhibited, brassy and good. People flocked to see them play. The established tour, featuring Australians Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and John Newcombe, was snidely referred to as The Rod, John and Kenny Show.

One commentator said Riordan had rid tennis of its medieval shackles and brought it to the masses. Riordan capitalized on his product by sponsoring nationally televised "Heavyweight Champion-ship of the World" matches which sent Connors first against Laver, then Newcombe, Manuel Orantes and Nastase. Then both players got out of hand. "Connors had a star quality

Spain, as the 1982 host, qualifies automatically. Still challenging France for second place in Belgi-um's group are the Netherlands and Ireland, who drew in Rotter-dam, 2-2. In other World Cup action Wednesday, Scotland beat Sweden, 2-0, Yugoslavia beat Den-mark, 2-1, Czechoslovakia beat Wales, 2-0, and Iceland beat Tur-

And England's professional stars went down to mostly amateur Norway, 2-1, while Oslo police battled drunken English fans. This was the first time in six matches over 41 years that Norway had beaten England.

London newspapers vied for the gloomiest verdict. "World Cup Disaster." headlined the Daily Mirror. "What a Disgrace," ex-claimed the Daily Mail, decrying "our most painful World Cup humiliation in the 31 years since England were beaten by the United States in the 1950 World Cup in Brazil."

For the Daily Express, England's team is "a multimillion-pound flop." The Sun recounted 'a night of borror and humiliation that now puts England down among the banana republics of world football." The consensus was that Romania and Hungary are now the likely qualifiers from England's group, although England still has a mathematical chance. Its manager, Ron Greenwood, observed that if Romania can beat Hungary in Bucharest on Sept. 23 and if England beats Hungary at Wembley on Nov. 18, "it could all be decided on goal average." And he urged Norway to beat Hungary in Budanest on Oct. 31. "Everybody wants to beat Eng-

1-2 record. The Swedes beat only tribute to us, but I am afraid at the moment we are not able to that tribute."

Rubik's Pentagon

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — On my birthday Steadman gave me a Ru-bik Cube. This will drive you mad," he promised.
"Steadman," I said, "do not think I am ungrateful, but the Rubik Cube will have to be put away in the drawer for awhile."
"Suit yourself," said he.

"Don't be hurt, please. I am dynow it's simply impossible."
Steadman's attitude was not ing to be driven mad, but right SOftened "Look, Steadman," I said, "I am one of the Baker slow people. I have to take things one at a time. Right now I am still trying to un-derstand the Laster Curve. How can I ever master the Laffer Curve the Rubik Cube drives me

His anger turned to pity. "You poor devil," he said. "The Laffer Curve was the most sensational piece of geometry of 1980, but now it is completely out of date. Why didn't you grasp it immediately? There was no time to get to it. I was still totally preoccupied with the Arc of Southeast Asia." "Nobody has been interested in the Arc of Southeast Asia for years," he said. "I noticed that late in my studies when people first began talking about the Laffer Curve. At first I thought maybe the Arc of Southeast Asia had been renamed the Laffer Curve. Then 1 heard that the Laffer Curve was a complete explanation of Reagan economics and I thought, well, they have economics in Southeast Asia, too, so maybe the Arc of Southeast Asia is a small segment of the Laffer

"Poor fellow. If you knew somebody in the Pentagon, they could have straightened you out right

Steadman noticed that I had blanched. "Is there something wrong?" he asked.

"Give it to me straight," I said.
"Is there also a Rubik Pentagon?" "Rubik has nothing to do with the Pentagon," he said. "Rubik in-vented the Cube, which would drive you mad if you weren't still bogged down on the Laffer Curye," "I am not completely stupid," I shouted. "I realize that the Arc kept me from mastering the Curve in time to go mad on the Cube. What I'm asking about is the Pentagon."

"The Pentagon," he said, "is the name of a five-sided building containing the offices of the Army, Navy and Air Force."

"The three armed services?"

"Diahe."

"Right" "Then why didn't they build it with three sides and call it the Tri-

Because it also contains the Marine Corps."
"They could have built it with four sides and called it the Square," I said, "What did they need the fifth side for?" "The whole point about the Pen-tagon is the fifth side, you idiot!" Steadman shouted. "If the Pentagon didn't build things nobody needs, it wouldn't be the Penta-guess I looked hurt. "I'm sorry I called you an idiot," Steadman said. "Why don't you just open up your nice Rubik Cube and go

I was mightily tempted, but my mind is the sort that gnaws questions to the marrow, and it suddenly occurred to me that a man as knowledgeable as Steadman might answer a question that had been nagging me about the Laffer

"Is the Laffer Curve located on one of the intelligence circles, Steadman?

Forget circles and play with the Cube," Steadman commanded. How could I forget circles when the president was traveling around the country saying that intelligence circles had discovered the Window of Vulnerability, through which Soviet Communism might enter at any moment and destroy all our magnificent geometry?

You can tell me, Steadman," I said. "I'm not a Commie. What shape is the Window of Vulnerability? They want us to think it's rectangular, don't they? But it's round, isn't it? Or maybe oval? Maybe they built it out of old seg-ments of the Arc of Southeast Asia and the Laffer Curve --- " In disgust, Steadman turned 180 degrees and made a straight line to the door.

Victor Vasarely

The 'Plastician' Whose Optical Creations Are Making the Prototype a Rich Man

By Jeffrey Robinson Herald Tribane ORDES, France -Op Art has to do with the combination of shapes and colors to produce a The word "kinetic' is often used interchangeably with "op" (for optical), and art historians generally agree that it got its impetus from the Bauhaus movement in Germany, and they frequently credit a student of the Bauhaus school as being the father of the Op Art movement. That man is Victor Vasarely.

"Optical effects exist basically in the eye and mind of the person who sees my work," he says. "That means the work completes itself only when looked at."

And looking at Vasarely's work is fairly easy to do because it seems to be everywhere. You find it in museums and in cities, on textbook covers and on posters. Less often you find it in serious art galleries, and only rarely do you find it at auctions. But then, Vasarely doesn't necessarily care for the use of the word "artist."

"I consider myself a plastician," he says, and then launches into a 45-minute lecture on the history of art. He summers here, where there is a medieval castle he has converted into a museum for his works. This is 30 minutes or so from Aix-en-Provence, where he has created a foundation that serves as another Vasarely museum.

His speech seems well prepared. The kind of talk he gives to all interviewers, the way he also gives them catalogs of his museums, in whatever language the interviewer wants to read. When asked for a photo, he calls forth someone who produces two huge black notebooks filled with plastic sleeves filled with photos. Stacked one on top of the other, the two notebooks measure nearly 18 inches thick. He selects a photo, and behind it are more of the same. That is followed with typed pages, stapled together, of biographies and bibliographies and histories of just about everything he has done. Twenty-nine pages in all, an up-to-date edition of the biographies and bibliographies that appear at the end of the museum catalogs.

The lecture continues. "The Renaissance created variations in existing styles, but nothing new. It was the Bauhaus that insisted things must change. I am a student of the Bauhaus. Easel painting is not the only valid form. It is wrong for an artist to think only of exhibitions, publicity, and art for art's sake. It is wrong for him to create works that have nothing at all to do with making the world more beautiful.

"I won't get bogged down with the word artist. I'm a promotor of an idea, a servant of humanity. What does the word artist mean? Every singer calls himself an artist too. That only has to do with technique. None of them have ideas. Most of them don't have any talcat. I call my work prototypes of an original idea. Everything I do is a point of depar-

What he means is that once he comes up with an idea, he has it translated into any number of various forms. His prototype may appear eventually as sculptures, silk screens, hihographs, murals, postage stamps and (rather than "or") whatever other forms he might think of. "It depends on what's need-

Working with 220 different colors (he calls them "nuances") and anywhere from six to eight assistants in his Paris studio (he employs a total of 50 people divided between Paris. Aix and Gordes, with more to be added to the payroll when he takes control of the Vasarely Center in New York) he begins with a prototype. He says he averages one a week. Most of them are in the form of collages, which are then blown up to larger sizes by his assistants. A series of photos is taken in four different sizes of film, and with six copies of each. The 24 negatives (or slides) are then either cataloged for future use, or sent to be printed as lithos, silk screens, posters, art prints, whatever.

Vasarely himself does not bother with the more mundane aspects of his work, preferring "to concern myself with creation and supervision. This is nothing new. It has always been this way. Michelangelo worked with 18 to 20 students who did his work for him. He might have added touches here or there, but mostly he supervised. And he didn't even pay Vasarely, on the other hand, pays his bills. The foundation at Aix cost more than 30 million francs (about $5.1 million). To restore and establish the museum here was another 15 million francs. And he paid for it himself. There is also the New York center, and a Vasarely Museum in the house where he was born 73 years ago in Pecs, Hungary.

"I've never taken any money from any government. I sell my work to finance my projects. I sold very well during the '60s, but the big rush came in 1970 and lasted about five years. For instance, one day a man came to see me in my studio in Paris carrying a suitcase. He had been sent by the German industrialist Gunther Sachs and he wanted to have 30 naintings all at once. The price was buy 30 paintings all at once. The price was 100,000 francs a painting. The man opened the suitcases and it was filled with cash. And that is only one example. During those years, this happened more than once."

To understand the size of the Vasarely opcration, you have to do a little math. He does 50 prototypes a year, and says he has 40 years worth of them. In silk screens alone, with editions of 250, that makes half a million pieces of paper. Those are signed and numbered. They can sell in his museums for anywhere from 300 to 1,000 francs.

Because there are frequent similarities between certain works, the question has to be asked if he uses the same plate to make different editions, simply changing the colors to make them different. His answer is an emphatic "no." His editions are printed from photos of the prototypes, but he says he very carefully controls them. "I sign and number them myself. The size of the edition is always made quite clear. I can sign and number 500 sheets of paper in just under two hours. And when I number an edition to 250, that means there are only 250. I'm not Salvador Dali." phatic "no." His editions are printed from

What happens to the plates is another matter. "I suppose they are destroyed." At least they are supposed to be. But then he adds quietly, "However there are unauthorized copies on the market."

"You're very business minded," he says and suggests it would be better to talk only of his work. "My work is divided into two parts, pictorial and theoretical." He points out a passage he has written for his catalogs. a few lines that show how he arrived at his creative position: "I drew well, I had a faultless technique, subjects suggested themselves by the hundred. In any one of these trends I could have made my way as a painter. I was gifted. I sold well. But I felt in myself the inexhaustible virtuality of a path not yet sur-

He follows that with the hint that there is much to learn by carefully studying the works on view in his various museums. "Look at the other artists of this era, and then look at me. Chagall for instance. He does the same thing all the time. And Picasso. He spent 30 years doing strange faces. But me, I can personally point to at least 30 different periods of my work." And each period is, of course, good for a lot of prototypes.

PEOPLE: Vanessa Reagrave Land New PLO Documentary Vanessa Redgrave Plans

British actress Vanessa Redgrave told UPITN, a television news ser-vice, that she plans to make a documentary film with the Palestine Liberation Organization that she said will show the influence of Nazism on Jewish nationalism in the 1930s. Redgrave, a longtime sup-porter of the PLO, arrived in seirut at the PLO's invitation to attend the International Conference for Solidarity with the Lebanese and Palestinian People. It would be her third documentary for the PLO. Redgrave made the controversial TV movie "Playing for Time," based upon the experiences of a Jewish woman in a Nazi concentration camp during World War II. Many Jewish groups criticized her selection for the role be-cause of her support of the PLO.

Former Gov. George C. Wallace has married 32-year-old Lisa Tay-lor, daughter of a wealthy coal mining businessman. Elvin Staton, Wallace's longtime personal aide, said they married recently. "Both are very happy," he said. He de-clined to say when or where the marriage took place or where the couple would make their home. Wallace, 62, has a home in Montgomery. His bride, a singer and onetime Wallace campaign trouper, is from Jasper, in north-ern Alabama's mining country. She is Wallace's third wife, was married once before and has a 5year-old son. Wallace has been paralyzed from the waist down since he was shot in an assassination attempt while campaigning for the presidency in 1972.

"Get me a seat on the first earth-moon shuttle," Italian President Sandro Pertini said, as he greeted U.S. astronaut Robert Crippen au the Quirinale palace in Rome. "Of course, Mr. President, of course," Crippen responded during a courtesy call arranged by U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Rabb. Palace sources said Pertini, who will be 85 on Sept. 25, asked Crippen and Rabb a second time to make a "firm reservation" for him on the inaugural flight of a regular U.S. space shuttie to the moon. Crippen, who pi-loted the United States' first space shuttle Columbia came to Rome for a conference of the Federation of International Aeronatics. . . Former astronaut Alan Bean, the fourth man to walk on the moon, has turned artist. He already has six acrylic paintings in the works showing the lunar landscape with total reality because he is the only and the second of the second o

artist doing moonscapes who has actually been there. He didn't get much chance to express his artistic side in the space program. As he told People magazine: "I remember once looking back at Earth and starting to think, 'Gree, that's beautiful.' Then I said to myself. 'Quit screwing off and go and collect rocks."

A beauty pageant in Salisbury has been postponed a week in the face of a row over whether a black or a white should wear the Miss Zimbabwe crown at the World contest in London in No-vember. The Irish-born organizer, restaurateur-businessman Tim Horgan, said his Hotelman compa-ny had pulled out of the contest and would hand it over to an unidentified "consortium." Horgan; who organized the first Miss Zimbabwe contest last year, also said he would not be able to "conduct the new event owing to prior com-mitments abroad." The Miss Zimbabwe finals were originally scheduled for today, but some black' Zimbabweans charged the white organizers were rigging the contest to guarantee a white would win and represent the former British colony at the Miss World pageant. Horgan, whose pageant last year produced a black winner, denied the charges.
